Dear [SalutationXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXXX],

Traffickers target the most vulnerable people in the world — women and girls who have few options for survival. The lies they tell to trick girls into sexual slavery run the gamut of promising good jobs to marriage proposals, as you will read about in this newsletter.

These voiceless girls need us to speak up on their behalf now more than ever. Since January is Human Trafficking Prevention month, consider how you might step into the stories of girls like Diya, who are targeted because of their innocence and vulnerability, with the good news of freedom — now and forever.

When women and girls are equipped with what they need to create a life of freedom, they take back the power from those who seek to oppress and use them. They are protected from the lies and false promises that lead to their destruction. Your continued support makes this pathway to freedom possible for women and girls in the most vulnerable places. Can I count on you to help prevent, rescue and restore in this new year?

Thank you for standing up against the evil that seeks to destroy by fostering new life for those who need it most.

Grateful for you,

Michele

Daniel Paul Rickett, who went to be with the Lord on October 23, 2021, invested his life in advancing the gospel among the least-reached by serving the servants of God in the hard places. His tireless passion led to assisting his wife, Michele Rickett, in founding She Is Safe nearly 20 years ago, which prevents, rescues and restores girls and women from suffering abuse and slavery, and equips them to build new lives. New Life Update

WINTER // 2021

ALMOST ENSLAVED, NOW SAFE AND FREE

During the COVID-19 lockdown in India, 16-year-old Diya fell in love with an older man by talking to him over the phone. When the lockdown ended, they made plans to spend a day together. They met and enjoyed their time, and in the evening they got on a bus to return home. Diya fell asleep during the bus ride, and when she woke up, they were in the middle of a strange city. The man told Diya he didn't want to live without her, so he was taking her to a temple to marry her. They got off the bus, and he told her he was going into the temple to speak with the priests about arranging a marriage ceremony. Minutes later two police officers approached Diya and took her to the station. The man had actually brought her to a Red Light district, and he had been caught in the act of selling Diya to a brothel.

The police brought Diya to the She Is Safe-sponsored Restoration Home; a safe haven for young girls to heal from trauma and learn about God's love for them. In this loving home, girls like Diya who are most at risk of being abused or trafficked into sexual slavery are able to envision new futures for themselves as they are supported in their education and encouraged to explore their talents. Some girls in the home were rescued from brothels where their mothers are sex slaves. Without this intervention, they would become enslaved as well, starting in their preteen years.

Diya is thankful for God’s miraculous protection. Through your support, Diya, rather than being enslaved, is now free to grow into who God created her to be.

NEW TRANSFORMATION IN MENA

Refugees and other outcast people have been especially devastated by the pandemic. For parents desperate to feed their children, selling a young daughter into marriage, often to an older man, may seem the only option. This insidious form of trafficking is common in the Middle East/North Africa (MENA).

She Is Safe recently launched a new Transformation Group (TG) program in this region as an addition to ongoing local anti-trafficking efforts. These TGs will equip women and teen girls with anti-trafficking knowledge, vocational, leadership and life skills, as well as systems for saving and borrowing from their own funds. This program has been proven in other countries where She Is Safe works to protect women and their daughters from the tricks of traffickers and create new possibilities to provide for their families. Soon, we will be multiplying the number of women and girls who will live free from abuse and slavery.

EVERY GIRL SAFE AND FREE

Lies. Manipulation. Exploitation. Abuse. These are things we all want to protect those most dear to us from. Tragically, millions of girls around the world don’t have any protectors in their lives, leaving them vulnerable to the plague of human trafficking.

She Is Safe’s vision is for every girl to be safe, free and equipped to become who God created her to be. Some might think this vision sounds impossible, but we know with God all things are possible. We have seen many miraculous victories in our 20 year battle against human trafficking. Those victories keep us moving boldly toward our vision. I know that you share this vision. Let’s renew our efforts to grow the movement. I am confident your heart will be forever changed.

For forgotten girls,

Michele

ZOYA’S STORY

I am eight years old, and I have never had a home with actual walls. Here in the Middle East, the tent where I live becomes hot in the summer and stays freezing in the winter.

We don’t have much to eat. My sisters are 13 and 15, and they are going to She Is Safe’s vocational school to become beauticians. They will not have to get married until they finish their education there. They tell me about their dreams to earn money from their new skills. My mother graduated from the She Is Safe vocational school as a seamstress. Others are learning computer skills and English. I want to be like my mother and sisters – learning skills to earn money to take care of myself and my family. They give me encouragement that I will not have to get married as a child; that there is a better future for me, too.
